

“A majority that remains silent doesn’t remain a majority.”

- Hon. Tony Abbott*

“We’ll always speak up for Australia, for its long-cherished values and for those afraid to speak out.”

- Sean Burke, editor

What we do

Politicom is an online community that brings together thousands of active conservatives in support of parliamentary candidates who hold similar values.

Who we are

Politicom’s founder, Sean Burke, has been a volunteer for more than 20 years supporting candidates who represent traditional Australian values.

Most recently he was on the leadership team of the late Senator Jim Molan’s 2019 Senate campaign – after the retired Major General was shunned by anti-conservatives within his own Party.

Burke has also held senior campaign management roles for Prime Ministers, Premiers and in key marginal seats.

He was on the steering committee of the successful Democratic Reform campaign which opened up candidate selection to all Liberal Party members.

How we do it

Politicom represents the active majority. We communicate with thousands of active campaigners across NSW and the nation. While many within our broad “team” are politically-minded, many others are non-aligned and get involved just because they’re passionate about Australia’s future.

How you can help

There are many ways you can help keep Australia the “Australia” you know and love. Join a centre-Right political Party. Volunteer to assist a parliamentarian or candidate who represents your values.

Or you can assist Politicom to continue reaching out and organising support for Australia-first candidates. Please see overleaf for sponsorship details.

Donating directly to a political Party is a vital ingredient to helping it win government. Your donation, however, often has little impact deciding the people who represent that Party in parliament.

What's the point helping a Party win government if its parliamentary representatives no longer represent your values? Or worse, opposes them.

Leftist activists have successfully marched through Australia's education and judicial institutions. They have captured, with little resistance, The Greens and the Australian Labor Party.

They are now in the process of infiltrating Australia's traditional centre-Right Parties - the Liberal Party and its regional cousin The Nationals. These activists do this by supporting so-called "moderate" candidates who, once elected, work to undermine and depose parliamentarians who don't conform to their often extreme views.

Politicom believes that people who vote for and support centre-right Parties should be represented by sensible centre-right parliamentarians.

To achieve this, the Politicom team is re-doubling its efforts to bring together a community of conservative activists. A community that turns out to campaign for causes and candidates who share a vision for a dynamic, successful and strong nation.

By sponsoring Politicom you can be confident that a greater number of conservatives like Alex Antic, Andrew Hastie and Jacinta Price will get the support they need to remain in Parliament.
